Rare Book Exhibition UVA Law Library / Spring 2022

Legal texts carry the marks of their past, from the inscriptions of a reader to the stitched bindings and chain-lined paper of a printer. These marks of ownership and construction reveal what law was, how it was read, and how it worked. Curated by students from across UVA, this exhibit brings together inscribed legal texts from the sixteenth to the nineteenth century, selected from the Law Library's Special Collections and the Albert & Shirley Small Special Collections Library. We invite you to explore the work of Law Inscribed, here and online.

born and raised in Miami, Florida. After graduating from Washington Carver High School, he served a tour in the United States Air Force before attending the University of Arizona, where he studied Political Science. He earned his Juris Doctor from University of Arizona Law in 1972. In college, Davis was a founder and the first member of both the Black Student Union and the Zeta Theta chapter of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity. He was also a participant in the University of Arizona's New Start Program, which provides students an opportunity to get a head start on their careers while getting to know the campus and meeting with faculty members.

Throughout his career, Davis has provided more than just legal services to those in need. He has served the Tucson community as a public speaker, mentor, and teacher. He currently is a

Exhibiting with IPLP Alumnus Joseph K. Austin

Selections from “The Wolf of Indian Country”

IPLP Alumnus Joseph K. Austin (2014)

In the 2021 July/August issue of the Arizona Attorney, the article The Words of the Talking God: Building and Sustaining Native Nations Through the Common Law appeared. Crafted by a current IPLP Doctor of Juridical Science Candidate and a 2014 IPLP graduate of the James E. Rogers College of Law, Joseph Austin, it is made clear that Native people have always had the rule of law. “In fact, the laws of Native Nations governed this country long before European contact, and they are still out there today, lying dormant in the hearts and minds of Native people, waiting to be recognized and reapplied again” (J. Austin, 2021).
